2019 KICKOFF PRESEASON RANKING ANALYSIS

- 1- CLEMSON (8 O; 4 D): Our ranking strategy in the preseason for the past few seasons has been "to be the best, you have to beat the best," and Clemson proved they were the best last season by dismantling Alabama in the National Championship Game. Leading the Tigers will be the All-American SO QB Trevor Lawrence, who took over 4 games into the season as a freshman last year. Their biggest challenge will be replacing the depth of their defensive front seven, where they lose 6 starters from last season. They only play one team that will begin ranked in the Top 15, an out of conference matchup with Texas A&M.
- 2- ALABAMA (6 O; 6 D): We expect the Crimson Tide to play with a massive chip on their shoulder in 2019 after the embarrassing way they closed out the 2018 campaign (that 44-16 drilling by Clemson). The good news for Alabama is that they should be even more explosive on offense with QB Tua Tagovailoa returning along with arguably the best group of WRs in the nation, led by Jerry Jeudy. Najee Harris takes over the lead spot in the RB rotation, with #1 RB recruit Trey Sanders behind him. The Tide return 3 of their starting LBs and 3 in their defensive backfield in what should be their most experienced returning defense in years. We think Alabama will have a spark in 2019 that they missed down the stretch a season ago.
- 3- MICHIGAN (8 O; 5 D): It's now or never for HC Jim Harbaugh and the Wolverines. Urban Meyer's retirement at Ohio State leaves a question mark at the top of the Big Ten Conference, and Michigan is in prime position to capitalize. They have a couple of tough, winnable games on the road, but get the Buckeyes at home this year. The Wolverines return 8 starters on their talented offense, led by QB Shea Patterson and 4 of 5 starters on the OL. They also see five starters return on defense. If there ever was a year for the Wolverines to get over the hump, this should be it.
- 4- GEORGIA (6 O; 6 D): Once again, it took last second heroics for Alabama to beat UGA off in a championship game, and last year it knocked the Bulldogs out of a playoff berth. In 2019, the Bulldogs return their starting QB and arguably the best offensive line in the nation, but lost a number of playmakers on the outside. With a very manageable schedule, Georgia is in a great position to run the table and face off against the SEC West Champion in the SEC Title Game. If the Bulldogs make it to the SEC Championship unscathed, they will have a great shot at making the playoffs regardless of whether they win or lose there.
- 5- OHIO STATE (4 O; 9 D): Urban Meyer's retirement may have brought a glimmer of hope to other members of the Big 10, but this is still an extremely talented team for new coach Ryan Day. They have to break in a new QB, but luckily for the Buckeyes the QB is talented UGA transfer Justin Fields. Things are much more settled on defense with 9 starters returning, including DB Jordan Fuller and DT Chase Young. Their early schedule has a few tough matchups: Cincinnati won 11 games last year, and they travel to a "waking giant" in Nebraska on September 28.
- 6- OKLAHOMA (4 O; 8 D): Oklahoma has turned the reigns over to their 3rd straight transfer QB in Jalen Hurts. While Hurts doesn't have the consistency throwing the ball as his immediate predecesors, he is lethal when a play breaks down and a better scrambler. He will have to use that ability for Oklahoma to repeat as conference champs as the Sooners have to replace 4 starters on their OL. Fortunately the schedule gives them time to get acclimated. They have the talent and experience on defense to make up for any growing pains on the other side of the ball before the annual matchup with Texas.
- 7- LSU (8 O; 8 D): With the amount of talent LSU has returning, they'd be a great bet to make the CFPs were they in any other division in any other conference. HC Ed Orgeron proved his doubters wrong last year with 3 major upsets and a top 10 ranking. Now "Coach O" has to meet the high expectations last year's success brought. In terms of returning players, this team has talent to be ranked in the Top 3, but their schedule is brutal, with an OOC game at Texas before they enter their conference games.
- 8-TEXAS (5 O; 3 D): With only 8 returning starters, Texas is a risky pick for any preseason Top 10, but the talent they do have coming back and their schedule plays heavily in the decision to rank them this high. QB Sam Ehlinger was one of the breakout players in 2018, and returns. They do have to play OOC opponent LSU, but they get the Tigers at home. An upset would see them shoot up near the top of the rankings heading into their yearly showdown vs. Oklahoma.
- 9- UTAH (7 0; 7 D): Utah has quietly been gaining steam over the last few years and the 2019 season is where we expect it all to come together for the Utes. Both QB Tyler Huntley and RB Zach Moss return after missing significant playing time last year due to injury. Even without them, the Utes still found their way into the PAC 12 Championship Game. With the experience they have returning on defense, this may be the year they win their conference for the first time since joining.
- 10- NOTRE DAME (7 O; 6 D): Notre Dame returns QB Ian Book and a great OL from last year's team which saw them reach the CFP, only to be embarrassed 30-3 by Clemson. This year they have to travel to Georgia and Michigan. An upset in one of those two games would see them jump back into playoff contention were they to win out. That's a tall order though because the schedule is tougher than last season as Stanford and Southern Cal should be improved. With 13 starters returning, this should be a better overall team than last year, but with a tougher schedule it will be more difficult to repeat the success.
- 11- WASHINGTON (7 O; 2 D): Chris Petersen should be a shoo in for a place in the College Football Hall of Fame, and it's no surprise that he's returned Washington to a championship level of play since taking over. The Huskies lost most of their starters on defense, but the level of talent on their roster should grow into the task ahead of them. They also lost their record setting QB, but that loss should will be minimal with former UGA QB Jacob Eason taking the reigns. Eason sat out last year, but has the talent to take the Huskies to new heights.
- 12- FLORIDA (5 O; 8 D): Florida was one of the surprise teams of 2018. After an early upset loss to Kentucky, the Gators reeled off 5 straight wins until back to back losses to Georgia and Missouri. They ended their season with 10 wins, and 2019 could see them surpass that mark. Much of their success is due to the maturation of QB Feleipe Franks. More than a few pundits had written off Franks entering last year and expected him to cede his starting job to talented FR Emory Jones. Franks upset all those prognostications and enters 2019 firmly entrenched as the starter, and will rely on returning WR Van Jefferson (who is a star in the making). They need to avoid playing 2 FCS opponents in the future.

- 13- OREGON (10 O; 7 D): Oregon has one of the deepest rosters in the country in 2019, with 10 starters on offense and 7 on defense returning. Among those returnees is QB Justin Herbert, who turned down a potential Top 10 NFL Draft selection to play his senior year. Along with Herbert, Oregon returns their starting line as well as their RB and a 1,000 yard WR. This is unquestionably a deep and talented team with a schedule that will be difficult to navigate through unscathed. They travel to Stanford, Southern Cal, and Washington. They also play Auburn in Texas on a neutral field.
- 14- TCU (7 0; 5 D): Last year was a down year for the normally reliable TCU as injuries hobbled them though out the season. They return 7 starters on offense. TCU couldn't keep their QBs healthy last season, with 4 different players starting due to injury. This position is still unsettled, with four more players competing for the starting position. At this point, K State Transfer Alex Delton appears to be the frontrunner. They should have time to grow into the leadership role as TCU has a schedule that will benefit them and whoever starts will be throwing to star WR Jalen Reagor.
- 15- TEXAS A&M (7 O; 4 D): QB Kellen Mond grew leaps and bounds in Jimbo Fisher's first season as the HC of the Aggies, and should improve even more in his junior season. The offense should be spectacular this year, and as long as their young defense can keep them close, they have the talent to surprise one or two teams ranked ahead of them on their brutal schedule.
